

WOMEN HEROINES AND VIOLENCE

Cristina Bertrand

Riaño, España, June 2016

Every day we see more women in comics, novels, movies, etc., who act as heroines. However, these women have often become as violent as male heroes, in an attempt to appear less "feminine", less women like.

This is a serious mistake. There is already enough violence in the world. Movies and comics even for children are increasingly violent every day.

We must change the paradigm and say enough is enough to violence. To this end I have created the Three Mongol Queens. They are heroines and they help people, but they are feminine, passionate and strong. Being strong does not mean being violent. Strong is being able to maintain independence and inner peace despite the circumstances. And to help other people also find that strength. And strength is being able to choose one's own destiny.

My Three Mongol Queens will change the paradigm. And I hope they will have many followers, both women and men.

It seems so fragile and yet...
it can unite
Heaven and Earth.